Harbor Bridge Project employees speak to Harold T. Branch Academy students on bridge design

Senior students who attend Harold T. Branch Academy got the “inside scoop” on the Harbor Bridge Project as they participated in a class presentation on the nearly $900 million dollar project. Jay Rohleder, Project Design Manager, and Lorette Williams, Public Information Coordinator, met with students to discuss not only the construction of this historic project, but the many careers that are associated with a project of this magnitude. Students were given a macro lesson in bridge design basics, while learning specific details about the bridge design elements to be used in the US 181 Harbor Bridge Project. Students asked several questions and many conveyed an interest in the fields of engineering, design and public communication—all jobs that are required on the Harbor Bridge Project. A big thank you to the students and their teachers, Lisa Jasek and Elizabeth Payne, for the invitation to present about this historical project.
